The kirmess, which is a fair held in Russia and eastern Europe, consists of booths expressive of various nationalities. The occupants will be in costume, will exhibit warres and movelities of their respective countries, and thereby give to visitors a glimpse of life in those countries. The Russian, Spanish (including the Gypsy camp), the Holland, the Japanese and Italian booths will form in contrast a most striking and brilliants seene; while the Greek of the control sellas and content to control sellas and content to make the property of the pr esting collection, will charm the eye and feast the soul. The ploneer booth will bring back many a memory, dear to the hearts of the old settlors, and over all Uncle Sam, with his Goddess of Liberty, will extend that hospitality for which he is

Every evening a grand murch in costume

Every evening a grand march in costume will take place at 8 o'clock, followed by a national dance, led by the booths especially in charge. The floor will then be open to visitors for general dancing, and good music will be provided.

The ladies hope to be able to add to this programme many novel features which cannot now be fully explained.

They feel that they have a right to appeal to the heart and intelligence of every inhabitant of this city in behalf of the kirmess as a means of repleting the shelves of the public library with the publications which it so much needs.

The society world is intensely interested, and much enthusiasm is engendered by the declaration of the coming kirmess. Prof. Younger will instruct the several corps of dancers in the respective national dances. It is indeed worthy of note that no foreign element is necessary to make this a perfect success. On other occasions when this exhibition has been undertaken talent was imported for its perfect rendi-

The Krouse musicale fulfilled the anticipations of the invited guests, and a most delightful rendition of the select musical programme still affords a pleasurable thome for discussion.

The card party of Mrs. James Lowe was a very recherche affair. The prizes were both handsome and appropriate. The happy combination of cards, refreshments and dancing was sufficiently varied to suit all tastes. There were present about fifty ruests, who were pleasantly enterthined. guests, who were pleasantly entertained until the early morning hours.

On Friday night Mrs. Niles and her guest, Mrs. Merian, planned a pleasant surprise for the doctor, inviting a number of friends for the evening and greeting marriage of Mr. Joh him upon his advent upon a call of "urgent him upon his advent upon a call of "urgent need of him at home" with a host of guests to celebrate his birthday. He was for once totally at a loss how to express himself, only a moment though, and as usual grasped the situation and did the honors grasped the situation and did the honors with case and was soon the life of the party. He may be twenty-four or thirty-four, but he is too madest to tell. May he have long to celebrate many more birthdays and always under the happiest auspices. Cards and refreshments reguled the guests until a late hour, when Alesdames Niles and Merian scored one against a man's feenlity for finding out things. man's faculty for finding out things.
